SINGLE PACKETS AT LIST PRICES. WE GUARANTEE

That all seeds sold by us shall prove to be as represented to the extent that should they not do so, we will replace them, or send other seeds to the same value. But we cannot guarantee the crop any further than the above offer, as there are so many causes which operate unfavourably in the germination of seeds in a tropical climate, over which we have no control. Among the causes of failure may be mentioned unfavourable weather which is one of the most important. The soil may be in proper condition when the seed is planted, but the weather which follows may be too wet, which will cause the seed to rot; or it may be too hot and dry, which des roys the germ before it shows itself. The soil may also be unfavourable for the variety of seed planted. And lastly; the seeds may be and are frequently destroyed by vermin of various kinds. Such occurrences are beyond the power of man to prevent and for which we cannot be responsible.

HIS EARLY INFATUATION. It was on September 16th, 1855, that King following telegrams are taken from our Pedro V., having attained his majority, assumed lian files:--the reins of power, which during his minority had remained in the hands of Fernando. The latter subsequently became known to many persons in America as the husband of Miss Llis Hensler of Boston, whom he married morganatically in 1869, and on whom he caused the title of Countess Edla to be conferred in 1857. Young King Pedro became deeply infatuated with the charms of the only daughter of one of the most powerful nobles of the kingdom. The Dake in question was himself the son of Princess of the blood royal, and the pride of both father and daughter were only equaled by their extraordinary ambition. King Pedro at one moment was on the point of making the daughter the offer to share his throne, but having consulted his father on the subject, was warned to pause before taking the step. For some reason or other the King in 1859 grew more and more distant in his attitude to hoped that Parliament would effect wards her and finally put an end to her aspirations by contracting a marriage with Princess Stephanie of Hohenzollern.

The Duke and his daughter, the Marquise, who were unable to conceal their chagrin and disappointment, left Lisbon a few days after the announcement of the King's betrothal and did not return to the capital until three months after the nuptials and been celebrated.

Within a couple of weeks after their reappearance the young Queen at the Court was lia in consequence of delicate health; suddenly seized with the mysterious malady and expired in a few days. Of course, as in the case of strict sense of duty which had of all personages of royal rank an entange took him to accept the Governorship of of all personages of royal rank, an autopsy took place, but either the insidious polson had not left a trace or it did not occur to the physicians to look for it, and death was supposed to be from young herself, and, he was sure, would natural causes.

In the summer of the following year-Dom 'Luis and Dom Joso paid a visit to England and were hospitably entertained by their relatives the Empire. While in London the Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police repeatedly urged the Portuguese envoy to hasten the departure from the metroclis of the two Princes, stating significantly that he was terrified lest an "accident of doubtful nature" should happen them while there, and that he declined the responsibility imposed upon him by their presence.

Curiously enough, it was at a banquet at which the Prince Consort occupied a place which had been intended for Dom Luis that the former was soized with the first symptoms of that "feverish cold" which two months later deprived Queen Victoria of the wisest, most saganious, and most devoted of husbands.
